Success of Utah

Visits of the Ogden manufacturers to a number of the factories during the past week, as a result of the celebration of Utah Products Week, have revealed to the financiers and the capitalists of the city the fact that the community is only on the threshold of its advancement as a manufacturing center. Ten days ago the factory men of Ogden did not realize, even to any considerable extent, the condition of the factories of the city and the surrounding country. A dozen informal luncheons have been given, conferences as to Utah Products Week have been held, visits have been made to the plants of four of the larger companies.

The result of these luncheons, these conferences, these visits has been that the manufacturers of Ogden now know that Ogden's prosperity is based upon actual facts. The realization has come that the sugar industry, if given protection of tariff as expected, will continue to grow. The development of every other industry, of the meat packing business and of the canning industry, are seen to be only starting, although the city has already achieved a strong place in the ranks of western manufacturing communities.

A factory manager was asked yesterday by a friend what he had learned about Ogden's and Utah's factories since the campaign for starting a Utah Products Week celebration had been opened and gave the following as some of the vital points:

Crisp Breakfast Bacon
